

BOYS' BASKETBALL:

Eighth-grade standout

Freedman could end up at local school

Posted on October 21, 2012 by Jack Pollon

One of the best eighth-grade basketball players in Southern California could end up at Harvard-Westlake or Chaminade, according to former Sierra Canyon coach and current global basketball promoter Ryan Silver.

Spencer Freedman is a 5-foot-9 guard who can really shoot the 3-pointer.

Freedman attends Willows School in Los Angeles and made eight 3-pointers in a summer club game playing for a 15-under Pump n' Run team.

Silver also said Brentwood and Windward remain in the mix to land Freedman, who is having the "Jewish Jordan" reference thrown around his name.

Freedman more than held his own playing in tournaments with players two and three years older than him.

Another big-time standout is Remy Martin, a 5-foot-11 point guard, who is already being targeted by the most prominent private schools in Southern California.

This entry was posted in Boys Basketball by Jack Pollon. Bookmark the permalink [<http://blogs.dailynews.com/preps/2012/10/21/boys-basketball-eighth-grade-s/>] .
